A Conversation With*

Chris Sembroski, Civilian Astronaut

Chris Sembroski is the dad of a Gig Harbor Tech Treker. He has also been to space as a member of the SpaceX Inspiration4 team. He will share his academic, military, and professional experiences that prepared him for this journey. Chris shares his excitement for the future through personal stories and his space photography.

His LinkedIn Page describes him as a commercial astronaut and accomplished aerospace professional with extensive experience in human spaceflight, space exploration, avionics, data analytics, and advanced aerospace system with expertise in systems engineering, commercial space operations, STEAM education, and energy efficiency initiatives. He is passionate about advancing human spaceflight, fostering STEM engagement, and driving innovative solutions to improve life on Earth.

Please join us as we learn about his experiences, the impact they had on him personally, and on his family.

Chris will share his experience with us, talk about where the private space program is headed, and how we are preparing future space explorers, particularly young women like his daughter. We will conclude the session with a Q&A segment.
